Large size roots have "3 to 5 eyes."

BY WAY OF EXPLANATION

WE OFFER, the present season, the following exceptionally choice and comprehensive list of peonies and irises. To the peony enthusiast, the list needs no comment and he will take special interest in the exceptional list of Japanese and Single varieties. The novice or flower lover purchasing for landscape or cut flower purposes will find his requirements in popular priced sorts in good selection, in the better of the standard varieties.

We show in heavy type what we term MASTER varieties. This in continuation of the custom of the Peterson Nursery of whose stock we had first selection when they discontinued business in 1924. The Master varieties are those which we consider the foundation of a collection of peonies, the indispensable; covering the full range of form, color, season of blooming and general dependable qualities. There are, of course many additional varieties which peony lovers in general and in fact, we ourselves would like to see in the list. However, to lengthen the list would defeat its purpose, confuse and bewilder rather than assist the garden lover seeking the better and outstanding distinctive things. As a further assistance, we give the rating as to desirability of the MASTER varieties based on vote of the American Peony Society; 10 being perfection. We also give the general color effect and time of blooming viz Early, Midseason and Late.

We price roots in two sizes. The column to the right is for large roots which have for years been known and considered as the standard root size viz roots of "3 to 5 eyes." In response to a popular demand of some few years ago, we also offer roots in a smaller size frequently incorrectly called "one-eye" divisions. These smaller roots we supply have "two or more eyes" and with a little special attention and the knowledge of the fact that for the lessened cash investment, a time investment is substituted will give satisfaction.

TERMS:—We guarantee all our stock to be in all respects first quality, true to name, etc.

An Apology — An Explanation and a Promise

IN the past, our one week point has been "service." We did not inherit our peonies and with them an established organization, land and buildings (even if but the usual run down farm buildings or those of a general nursery). We have purchased all our peonies within the past eight years. Hence have no accumulation of old, inferior varieties and no land which ever before has been planted to peonies or irises. So the situation is not without its advantages.

Our business has grown beyond our expectations and the first six years we purchased additional land each year. This resulted in our plantings being in three locations; making shipping difficult. Three and a half years ago, we purchased a large tract of land on Telegraph Road, Lake Forest, Ill. We have been putting it into shape, tiling, fertilizing, grading, etc. and each fall have done our propagating to there. Last fall, we completed the preliminary development and propagation and now have all our plants concentrated on one property.

Now that we have things all in a bunch "like the bananas," we are about to construct a group of buildings specially designed for the peony business. Buildings will consist of superintendent's cottage, packing shed (which in blooming season may be used for display of bloom), general and private offices, propagating and tool sheds and cold storage room for both roots and flowers. Construction will be of stone with slate roofs in the sixteenth century English style typical of the district south of Stratford-on-Avon and built about a walled garden court.

So we are in position to give "service" which we feel is excelled by none. Due to our extensive plantings, we are seldom "sold out" no disappointments whatever.

You may think us a bit "over enthusiastic." Come and visit us in 1928 and see if you do not consider that our buildings, etc. are unequalled for their purpose from the view point of practical utility and unexcelled by none as are the quality and quantity of our plantings.

IRISES

For many years, we purchased every new variety of iris as introduced, by both foreign and American hybridizers. The introduction of new iris varieties has now gone from the sublime to the ridiculous to such an degree that we are very hesitant to add new introductions. We have over 400 varieties. In fact, we are disposed to consider irises for their effect and value as color, etc. in the garden, rather than as individual blooms. We shall continue to pay even more attention than in the past to the beardless forms. Our experience is that they are just becoming to be appreciated and are in a position similar to that of the Japanese and Single form of peonies five years ago.
